General Information

The sapphire dragons of the Io's Blood Isles control subterranean domains beneath two of the larger southern islands. While most of the territory above their realms belongs to the emerald dragons, they keep a small portion of the surface area as their own as well as the extensive caverns beneath the tropical jungles.

From birth, sapphire dragons are beautiful, with scales ranging from light to dark blue in color, which sparkle in the light. Because of their coloration, they are sometimes mistaken for blue dragons.

Of all dragonkind, perhaps the sapphire dragon clans are the most militaristic. They fervently protect their territory from outsiders, going so far as to distrust anyone who even gets close to their borders. They work to keep their vassals in peak fighting condition, maintaining some of the best-trained armies in the isles. As most of the territory that interests the sapphire clans is below ground, they rarely come into conflict with other dragon clans unless they attempt to take caverns currently in use. Only the black dragons compete with them for the tropical underground, and even they are wary of going into direct conflict with the armies of the sapphire clans.

Most of the demihuman vassals serving the sapphire dragons are either dwarves or gnomes, as these races have no problems living and working beneath the ground. Also, elves are too much like drow, whom these dragons consider to be one of their natural enemies. Dwarven vassals are treated little better than slaves, as the two species were once at war, and they are almost never granted the kindred bond. This honor is usually reserved for gnomes only.

Giant spiders make up most of a sapphire dragon's diet, and great hunts are conducted through the subterranean tunnels to find these delicacies. When a dragon lord feeling particularly lazy, it will send its dwarven vassals into the tunnels in search of the spiders. Of course, they must capture the spiders alive.

While militaristic and warlike, the sapphire dragons are not quick to attack. They prefer to observe intruders (all visitors are intruders) so that they can plan how to deal with them. If drow or dwarves from another clan approach, they are immediately attacked. Others can often at least make some gesture of friendship or parlay before being told to leave.

Special and Innate Abilities

The total number of disciplines, sciences, devotions, and defense modes never rises above the listed limits, though the psionic strength points continue to increase until the maximum limit is reached. For sapphire dragons, PSPs cannot exceed 200. Dragons using the psionicist kit gain psionic powers as psionicist PCs of the same level.

Dragon Tactics and Attacks

Typical Tactics: Sapphire dragons like to observe possible enemies before attacking, unless drow or dwarves from another dragon's domain are present. Those who are not overtly hostile are treated to conversation and spells while the dragon attempts to determine their intentions. If a sapphire dragon or its treasure is ever threatened, it attacks immediately with its breath weapon, spells, and physical attacks. It uses psionics and special abilities to escape if faced with a more powerful foe.

Physical Attacks: A sapphire dragon's claws cause 1d8 points of damage, plus its combat modifier. Its bite causes 3d6+2 damage, plus combat modifier.

Breath Weapon: A sapphire dragon's breath weapon is a cone of high-pitched, almost inaudible sound. The cone is 75 feet long, 5 feet wide at the dragon's mouth, and 25 feet wide at the end. Opponents caught in the blast can save vs. breath weapon for half damage. A second saving throw vs. breath weapon is needed to keep from fleeing in fear for 2 rounds per age category of the dragon, plus 1d6 rounds. This fear is a metabolic effect, and even those immune to magical fear suffer the results if they fail the saving throw. Deafness prevents the fear effect, but does not lessen the damage caused by the cone of sound.

Base Movement: 9, Fl 30 (C), Br 6.

Mating

Gem dragons, meanwhile, fall somewhere between the other two families. Amethyst dragons approach mating in a very logical manner, seeking the optimum partner to produce the best offspring. Love and pleasure rarely, if ever, enter the equation. Emerald and sapphire dragons take a single mate for long periods of time, though each for a different reason. Emeralds like the security and protection offered by a trusted partner, while sapphires seek to possess a mate to enhance their prestige and status. Topaz and crystal dragons are irresponsible and chaotic, and their societies reflect this. They mate with willing partners whenever they want, as desire and need move them. Fortunately, however, they are more selective than the black and white dragons.

Dragons of all types tend to mate with members of their own type. Gold dragons mate with golds, red dragons mate with reds, and so on. Sometimes they will go against their natural tendencies and mate with dragons of other types.

The mixed-appearance crossbreeds, however, are considered abominations. The chromatic dragons tend to kill these hatchlings immediately. Metallic dragons simply banish them from their domains (rumors abound that these crossbreeds are sent to other worlds, but this has yet to be proven). The gem dragons, however, believe that something as majestic as a dragon can never be an abomination. In the rare instances when a gem dragon produces a mixed hatchling, the newborn is allowed to remain a member of the clan.
